| Organizational       | Implement consistent training to enhance capacity for care and build DEIB/JEDI competency among faculty and staff | Action Step 1: Implement long-term cohort-based training model, the MDT Educational Equity Cohort, which all teaching faculty will be required to participate in once every 7 years.
Action Step 2: By end of fall 2022 roll out interactive, evidence-based training on conflict navigation and mental health gatekeeping in partnership with ASU counseling services. These 1.5 hour trainings available for faculty, students, and guests will include direct experiential practice in managing common basic conflict situations, micro aggressions, and redressing of harm between faculty, students, and staff, with scenarios approached through an equity lens. Trainings are based on the Confess Project model, an equity-based intervention that focused on building capacity for care and mental health support in front-line community members in order to improve outcomes for entire communities.
Action Step 3: Working with the Mediator’s Collective, design and implement custom intensive trainings for MDT faculty and staff to build capacity for mediating difficult conversations in classrooms, including bystander intervention, equity-based conflict resolution, and responding to intersectional equity issues arising in conflicts among students. These 4-hour trainings will be offered at least once per year. | By end of spring 2023, at least 33% of faculty will have participated in one of these training options, with capacity for another 33% of faculty to participate in a training or cohort for the following year.
Faculty will feel more equipped to handle issues that arise in learning spaces; faculty will have a better understanding of how to prepare class for tackling complex and difficult material and/or addressing the context and importance of presenting work by under-represented artists and art forms. | School leadership, representation from faculty DEI committee, representation from student IDEA committee, faculty and staff | Action 1: First cohort in process during 2022-23 academic year

Organizational Culture | Nurture a culture of transparency in which students clearly understand and readily make use of multiple options for sharing concerns and feedback, particularly related to issues of equity, inclusion, belonging, and justice. | Action step 1: Build a school-wide system for students to report concerns and encourage students to use it for resolution. Build a loop process to include how we will handle concerns; communicate with students and seek their ideas for resolution and/or solutions; determine actions and follow through; and provide a report back to students with information that we are able to discuss based on the individual situation. See objective below for crisis response process, a related initiative. Action Step 2: Per IDEA committee request, pursue expansion of existing safe set transparency and reporting systems used for theatrical production to other areas of the school. Plans include the use of print materials in all program classrooms, creation of a canvas class as a central location for resources on reporting systems, and student-produced training videos as an accessible alternative to the text-based delivery system for those materials for students/staff/faculty who require a different | By end of 2023, information about reporting options will be posted online and physically across MDT programs. By end of 2023, we will be able to analyze data on the number of reports received and resolved through the new system. Student culture and climate will improve; students will feel seen and heard; effective solutions will result in improvement to climate. Students will be given the opportunity to provide feedback on the system developed and suggested improvements. Faculty will include information on reporting system and direct contacts in all syllabi. | School leadership, representation from faculty DEI committee, and representation from student IDEA committee | Action Step 1: In process, currently in discussion about best practices; Crisis response loop process is currently in use in the 2022-23 academic year. | Organizational Culture | Implement trauma-responsive practices in communication about crises and reporting systems. | Action Step 1: Implement new trauma-responsive crisis response process, developed in collaboration with students in spring 2022, which prioritizes consultation with impacted parties throughout crisis response, clear and transparent communication and follow-up, and the use of resources such as counseling services as routine part of response to crises.
Action Step 2: Communicate to students about new crisis response process.
Action Step 3: Build “what to expect/how to report” modules into all ASU 101 equivalents to ensure students understand their reporting options in advance of needing them. | By end of spring 2023, students will understand what to expect in problem-solving and crisis situations and program leadership will consistently consult and apply the trauma-responsive crisis response model in appropriate situations.

engagement involving small-group seminars with ASU thought leaders in equity and pedagogy designed to produce the following:

- Robust understanding and application of rigorous practices for pedagogical development toward continual improvement in equity and access
- Immediate revisions to individual syllabi and teaching practices
- Connections across MDT divisions, growth of new communities of practice
- A growing collective of educational equity peer coaches who are trained through this process
- A community in which to envision expanding equity, access, justice, and inclusion, through the process of dream seeding and harvesting throughout the year, guided by Associate Dean for Culture and Access Melita Belgrave
- A visible presence for educational equity on MDT's website detailing all DEI initiatives.

Action Step 2: at the close of spring 2023, MDT educational equity cohort members will present lessons

-Demonstrate connections across school divisions and new communities of practice that center advancing equity within music, dance and theatre

-Present to MDT faculty sharing what they learned and next steps

Cohort members will become part of a growing collective of educational equity peer coaches; We will build connections across school divisions and new communities of practice.

Action Step 2: By the end of spring 2023, at least 75 percent of faculty will have attended at least one event at which best practices for equity-based pedagogy are shared and discussed across MDT, and at least two new events for the following academic year will be planned.

Action step 3: By the end of fall 2022, we will publish a dedicated page on MDT website that chronicles the progress of our DEI initiatives, the Educational Equity Cohort and provides access to the resource portal for all faculty.

Action Step 4: Peer mentors will be supported with learned/best practices at an mdt-wide faculty symposium to broaden the impact of cohort activities

Action Step 3: The School of Music, Dance and Theatre has developed a set of materials and resources for equitable classroom spaces. We will continue to develop this resource and create a portal for all faculty to have access to the materials, and a place for them to contribute so that it is an ever-evolving portal of materials for use.

Action Step 4: By fall 2025, we will have increased the number of faculty able to serve as educational equity peer coaches to 30% of the faculty.
